WE MUST RUMINATE.

New Years Reflections Upon the Sad Sad Untutorship Around Round.

Five times the door of the sacred grass hut fane in which the TRIBUNE editorial snicker snee scoops the scoops and loops the loops has been profaned. Within five months, this sacred portal which opens toward the rising sun and the sea, has been darkened by five towering forms clothed in the robes of indignation. Upon each brow hovered Olympusclouds and from eagle eyes, forked lightning darted ominous flames. Fivetimes in tones that would melt brass and paralyze a marble statue the fell words "Where is the editor," have reverberated along the roof pole of our sanctum, reaching the editorial tympanum in the dark corner, where that factotum sat trembling by his oil lamp, his bony fingers clutching a frayed goose quill, with which he was wont to inscribe vitriolic diatribes against his fellow men.

"Where is the Editor?"
The question repeated twice usually serves to bring the editor from his dark corner into the presence of a caller.

Then comes a torrent of questions. Did you write this article? Are you responsible for this insult? Are you allowing my enemies to edit this paper? Did Groceryman Smith crack a pun over the head of of Groceryman Brown? Did Parson Jones poke fun at a second edition of Bill Nye? Did my ancient enemy creep into your fingers and inspire that stick of silly rot which haunts my character like a jim jams dream?

"Please go in peace and let me live," the editor has said, now five times. "No, I don't write things for this paper," the editor has been compelled to admit on these five occasions. "We have a Japanese yard boy who does all the writing. He writes jokes on the American Eagle and pokes fun at Judge Little. He has a story in incubation now that involves Captain Lake and his running mate Mr. Overend. The same yard boy is at work on a three act comic opera founded on scenes at a business meeting of the Cotillion Club and a german ball. The yard boy also has quite a collection of charming tid bits, monologue and dialogue, which bring into play the exquisite side of half the people in the public eye on this Island."

The yard boy is more tyrannical than our loathsome contemporary which wastes so much time in drawing the line at personalities and in measuring the size of advertisements in the TRIBUNE. The yard boy comes and to the editor he says, "this must go." It goes, and the editor hunts up Lockington, the undertaker to arrange for the grim but necessary rites. Lockington has been disappointed five times.
Now, upon reflection it occurs to the writer that the little gem village of Hilo is more cosmopolitan in the make up of its population than any other village in America. Under the wide spread wings of the egotistical American Eagle, we have here, people from the Arctic ice floes to the sun baked latitudes of the tropicest tropics. They come from Scotland, England, The Colonies, Canada, America, Germany, Spain, Portugal, France, Switzerland, Porto Rico, Japan, China, Italy and Honolulu. In these countries, the press knows every degree of censorship from the pistol shot in Texas to the throttling statutes against "lese majeste" in the German Emperor's code. The censorship consists in the ignorance of the people, which is more effective in closing the news paper shops, than either "lese majeste" in Europe or derringers in Texas and Arizona. In Honolulu a country to which Hilo is bound by ties of contiguity and sparse few interests in common, there is no news paper censorship. Honolulu has been educated in this respect far beyond the dreams of the most optimistic news paper men who ever wrote in terror at Hilo, in Texas or in Germany. In Honolulu names are permissible in the columns of a news paper. If the wife of John Doe gives birth to a child, usually names of both parents, if they are known, are published in the news papers. If there are troubles between young people who are engaged to be married, they usually find their way into the Advertiser. If anything crooked happens anywhere, the Independent tells the people about it. The papers go a hot pace over there and libel suits have gone out of date. Volcano Marshal wrought prodgies in the reform movement which brought Honolulu to its present high plane of civilization on the subject of what should appear in the news papers. He has finished his task and will soon leave for the Manila to continue his life work of reform. His failure to come to Hilo and minister to the needs of her people, is a great loss. The calamity is wellnigh irreparable. The job of "breaking this community in," so that it will receive with a smile, direct, positive, clean, fearless, good natured, wholesome, American, impartial and grown up newspaper stuff is a task in which we would fain call to our aid the herculean brain, and the silver lance of a Volcano Marshal.

But he is going away. The yard boy too, talks of returning to Japan. The out look is gloomy. It does seem that for another decade at least, the stuff in Hilo newspapers must continue to be sugar-tit pabulum for sucking babes and medicated powder for the touch tender skins of Different infants.
"When I am dead and gone," said Joe Chamberlain in a speech to a vast audience of Britishers; "When I am dead and gone, this great empire will live on; when I am forgotten, the Empire's grand mission in the earth will proceed—, "But what if you live?" interrupted a cruel listener.
